We find the highest quality herbs and Liquid Copal (Essential Oils) from all around the world. We work with small family farms that grow the plants right (organically) and then either dry or distill them properly (low temperature and no/low pressure). A plant grown in the “proper” part of the world will produce a superior herb or copal when dried or distilled with care.

Almost every one of our Liquid Copal are either Certified Organic (the farm has an organic certification from their government agency), Organically Grown (grown organically but not certified, some countries do not offer organic certification), or Wild (grown by nature). The select few that we do not sell organically at this time is due to the extreme high cost of that oil grown organically (usually 4 to 10 times the current conventional price). The conventional oils that we sell are still harvested and distilled with the ideal of obtaining the highest quality oil from the plant. These few conventional oils will be replaced with organic once a high quality cost effective replacement can be grown.

To insure your confidence about our oils we offer the following return policy.

- 30 day return policy.
- We will refund any unused portion of the oil or herbal supplement.
- No returns will be accepted without prior authorization and the customer assumes responsibility for the package until it arrives at our location.

Dedicated to the quality and purity of our product, we purchase our herbs and oils from around the world and only accept those meeting strict quality guidelines. Our oils are tested with Gas Chromatography and Spectrometry or GC/MS testing, which means we test which molecules are present in a sample and check them against a recognized standard. Through this testing, we find any impurities or chemical fertilizers, and discover whether or not the oils have been diluted or altered in any way. We only sell the highest quality 100% pure liquid copal. If you are used to using lower quality or “Therapeutic Grade” oils, you will be amazed at our quality improvement.
